

Privacy Policy

At Kaiko, we respect your privacy and take data security seriously. We use security measures to prevent the accidental loss, unauthorized access or misuse of data. This Privacy Policy sets out our practices regarding personal data of clients, prospects, contacts, and visitors to our website, and how we treat and process such data (“you” or “your”).

For the purpose of the General Data Protection Regulation, including the laws of France (the “GDPR”) and any legislation that is applicable, the data controller is Challenger Deep SAS, 128 rue La Boetie 75008 Paris, France (“Kaiko” or “we” or “us” or “our”).

We may collect and process your personal data. For example, you may give us information about you when you register on our website, www.Kaiko.com, by communicating with us by certain means, or subscribing to our reports and publications and attending our events. The information you give us may include your name, address, email address, phone number, date of birth, identity documents, username, password, job title and company information (including web links and addresses), and any other details you choose to provide to us.

Where you use our website or interact with us over the internet, including via social media, we may automatically collect certain information such as technical information, including IP addresses, browser type and version, time zone setting, and information about your visits to our website. We may also collect, use and share aggregated data such as statistical or demographic data.

We may collect information about your use of our website from cookies. A cookie is an application that helps us understand how you use our website.

We use and process your personal information to provide you the requested products and services (including those that include third party services, which may trigger the disclosure of your personal information to such parties), to perform our contractual obligations to you, to pursue legitimate interests in developing, improving and marketing our products or to comply with our legal obligations.

We store your personal information on our secure servers in the EU; however, certain third party services providers (that we may use as part of our products or services) may result in the transfer of your personal information outside the EU or the European Economic Area.

We retain your personal data solely as long as necessary for the relevant purpose for which it was obtained. Under the aforementioned data protection laws, you have certain rights to access and query your retained personal data. To exercise your rights or if you have any questions about this Privacy Policy, please contact us at legal@kaiko.com.